Books that accurately represent the diversity of the human experience can foster children’s positive self-concept and respect for diversity. When supporting children’s literacy development around the world, applying diversity and inclusion best practices to children’s storybook collections develops children as empathetic citizens as well as skilled readers.

Join Christabel Pinto, Room to Read Senior Director, Global Literacy Program, as she draws on Room to Read’s global storybook collection of more than 1600 titles in 42 languages to discuss the importance of inclusive storybooks to support education for all children.
